Religion in the Atomic Age

• I am writing a big thank you to (CBW) with regards to Morning Devotions. Especially since the realistic Tocsin 2 (civil defence exercise) we could do with more programs of a religious nature.

I especially liked the broadcast from St. Ignatius Church (CBW Church Service) last Sunday. The choir music was first rate and the sermon most fitting in these troubled times.

I am looking forward to the Christmas programming both on radio and television. I still vote for Channel 3 (CBWT) as best in the Winnipeg area. Let's have more religious programs and less "gun-toting." — Mrs. E.E.R., Winnipeg.

A Vote for Sam McConnell

• My neighbours were really delighted with (Red River Jamboree) Saturday night (Nov. 11). Please let us have some more of the same, especially Sam McConnell. He sure is a broth of a boy and light on his feet like the proverbial Irishman... On Saturday night my phone kept me busy—everyone was asking the same thing: "Did you hear the McConnell boy sing?" Well I sure did, and I think he will hold a candle to his uncle Joe McNally, the Irish tenor from Ballamena. — Mrs. M.S., New Westminster, B.C.

Appreciates Hour of St. Francis

• We would like to express our great appreciation of "The Hour of St. Francis" (Good Life Theatre) on Sunday, November 19. We thought it a fine picture and do hope we will see more of them.

While writing, might say we are enjoying Playdate very much — "Masterpiece" was wonderful and "Heir to a Shoe String" a riot. We enjoy all the football too, and don't understand why people complain when it is only on for a comparatively short time in the fall, and they have the rest of the year for other things — Mrs. and Mrs. N.J.L., Winnipeg.

• I would like to express my appreciation of this excellent program ("The Hour of St. Francis") which appeared last Sunday after an absence of several weeks. . . .—Miss J.C.M., Winnipeg.

Disapprove of "the Bare Facts"

• In regard to the program at the beginning of November on Close-Up on a nudist colony in Toronto, I am writing on behalf of the Holy Trinity C.W.L. Council in St. Boniface.

If such a discussion had to take place, could it not have been conducted while the guests were clothed, so that a great number of the cross-Canada population would not have been offended?

It was certainly in poor taste, and they should be more mature in choosing their (topics).

Please in future productions, use more discretion and spare us the bare facts of such non-conformists.—Mrs. N.J.R., St. Boniface, Man.

Comments from the South

• We had the good fortune to have our television set poop out in August. This eliminated a pernicious consumer of time in our household, and we were able to enjoy the benefits of CBW much more frequently. It constitutes our radio diet almost exclusively. . . .—W.R.C., Fargo, N.D.

• . . . One thing disquiets me: the growing tendency of Canada's programs to emulate those of the U.S.A.—more and more extraneous and deceitful advertising . . . all slanted to the Almighty Dollar as the resultant end. . . . I regret this, even though I am an American with six generations of Americans behind me, and now three generations below, as I am 73 years old and seven times a great-grandfather. . . . Now will you please give me a line on the CBC's present-day set-up. What has become of (CBC Radio)? Are you going American, or are you going to continue to give us Canada and Canadians, with Britain and Britishers, which today seems to me to be the Ideal of Democracy.—A.H.F., Longville, Minn.

The LIVING MACHINE

SINCLAIR

THE ANCIENT Chinese started it all with their abacus, the bead-frame children use in learning to count. Now an ultra-high-speed bead-frame is challenging human intelligence. Today an electronic computer can do half-a-million additions in a minute, run assembly lines, translate languages, play checkers—and win, forecast the weather, and even explain why a young man should enter the ministry. Unlike humans, it never gets fatigued, never gets bored, its attention never wanders, and it never makes subjective errors. Tomorrow scientists promise us smarter robots that will be able to take dictation and type letters, draw blueprints, make medical diagnoses and even reproduce themselves. And the day after tomorrow?

Dr. Norbert Wiener, world-renowned mathematician who has contributed much to the development of the electronic computer, says that if man isn't careful, he may be destroyed by his machines, because modern machines have learned to think, to learn from experience, and to work lightning-fast without side-effects. When electronic brains start to make the decisions in push-button warfare, he says, we may be going the way of the dinosaur.

What will these super-smart robots look like? Professor Claude Shannon of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, describes them as "probably something squarish and on wheels—so they can move around and not hurt anybody and not get hurt themselves. They won't look like mechanical men in comic strips. But you'll want them about man-size, so their hands will come out at table-top or assembly-line level."

He says: "I expect in 10 to 15 years we will see machines doing complex intellectual tasks—writing theorems of interest to mathematicians, understanding their environment. As for poetry, art, music, novels—they are several magnitudes beyond the machine, since they involve emotional relationships with the outside.

Wednesday night, CBC-TV's Explorations presents the first program in a two-part study of the nature and significance of electronic computers. It was directed by Roman Kroiter for the National Film Board, and edited by Guy L. Coté.

The first program reviews current experiments in extending the new computers' versatility. Electronic computers are shown solving many problems in which the original data can be reduced to mathematical expression. Scientists are at work on processes by which these machines can be made to learn from experience, somewhat like the human brain.

When they first hit the market after the Second World War, all-purpose computers cost a million dollars. Now, for about $25,000, an 'idiot-proof' machine is available which, unattended, can average 5,000 mathematical computations in a minute. With only a monitor standing by, it can figure out the earnings (including deductions) of an 800-man payroll and print the cheques. It can also do invoicing, sales analysis, brokerage accounting, probability analysis, differential equations—and many other things. This remarkable robot is only as large as an ordinary steel desk with a typewriter on it, weighs 375 pounds, plugs into a standard wall outlet, and uses as little electricity as a toaster.

One of the most remarkable things an IBM electronic computer can do is translate Russian into English at the rate of 1,800 words a minute. Human translators average 2,600 words a day. The machine is far from formidable-looking. It's a glass disk about the size of an LP record, and it holds a vocabulary of 60,000 words etched into a code on the glass. After a typist feeds the Russian to be translated onto a tape, the tape converts the letters into punch holes and they are converted into electric signals. An electric beam races up and down the disk, matching incoming code with the vocabulary code. Occasionally the machine puts its human operators into a

More Local Drama For CBWT Viewers

Alwyn Scott—CBWT drama producer—announces three half-hour plays soon to be presented on channel 3. All three scripts are by local writers. Producer Scott considers the standard of local writing above average and has scheduled these selections for current production after reading and analyzing close to 200 manuscripts submitted from the prairie region during the past year.

The first play, to be presented Wednesday, December 20, is The Kidnapping At Scratching River by William Paluk, a drama of life in Manitoba about 1850, based on the life of Sister St. Therese, one of the founders of St. Mary's Academy and St. Boniface Hospital.

Mr. Paluk has had one previous drama produced on CBWT—Taken at The Flood; and is a prolific contributor to CBW's Prairie Playhouse. His latest television script is described as a warm, human tale of the Sister's personal relationship with the hard pressed pioneers.

The lead role will be played by Frances Depres with Marion Waldman and Joe Mauro in the supporting cast.

Early in 1962 The Hot Umbrella by Art Smith and The Devilled Egg by Mort Forer will round out the current schedule of CBWT drama productions.

A Natural Development

"As an economist I think of automation as simply part of a process which has been going on through the centuries. It's a process whereby mankind learns to produce things while putting in less man-hours of work to do it. I wouldn't like to think of automation as something different from, say, the invention of the spinning jenny, or the introduction of railways as a means of transport in place of using horses."—W. B. Reddaway of Cambridge University, speaking on the BBC.

A Lesson in

Sex Appeal

WHEN IT COMES to attracting females, the human male has nothing on the prairie chicken or its close relative, the sharp-tailed grouse. Man resorts to all kinds of ruses to gain the attention of the opposite sex and usually, woman falls for them if they are carried out with finesse. Similarly, the male grouse uses an elaborate ceremony to attract the hen.

The mating season for the male grouse in this particular species begins in the spring when the birds actually return from winter migration. They settle out on their dancing grounds throughout the Canadian prairies and then each morning and evening the males gather for conferences which precede the actual mating ceremony.

Once the ceremony begins, the male spreads its wings and its tail becomes prominent. The birds actually dance and at the same time chirp out a succession of low, intense, hollow sounds which can be heard for miles around—a sound like many drums. This is the cue for the hens to drop around to the dancing area; if they like what they see, they stay. The mating season usually lasts until early summer.

Three prominent nature photographers and Dr. W. W. H. Gunn, one of the world's foremost recorders of the sounds of nature, spent most of last spring and summer filming and recording the sights and sounds of Canada's birds and animals. The results will be seen and heard this Monday night on CBC television when Camera Canada presents an hour-long program titled Last Summer.

Included in the production is the mating ceremony of the sharp-tailed grouse, which is often incorrectly referred to as the prairie chicken—the real prairie chicken is the pinnated or square-tail grouse—but both species are similar in many respects.

The three photographers who accompanied Dr. Gunn on the filming and recording of the scenes for the program are Dick Bird of Regina, H. Kenneth Campbell of Peterborough, Ont., and Cleveland P. Grant of Wisconsin. Both Bird and Grant have done photography for Walt Disney nature films.

Dr. Gunn, field secretary of the Ontario Federation of Naturalists, is no stranger to CBC radio listeners. He recorded the sounds of Canadian birds for two award-winning programs heard on the CBC Trans-Canada radio network. One was Birds of the Forest, which, in 1955, won an award offered annually for outstanding documentary programs by the Italian Newspapers Association and presented at the same time as the Italia Prize. The other was last year's Voices of April, which won an Ohio Award this spring. Thom Benson, supervising producer of Camera Canada and the writer of Last Summer, prepared the Voices of April program.

Half of Last Summer deals with the broad-leafed forest of southern Ontario. This portion of the program was filmed and recorded at Rondeau Provincial Park, on the shores of Lake Erie. Among the animals and birds to be seen and heard during this segment are the white tailed deer, the white footed mouse, the chipmunk, red-headed woodpeckers, black-capped chickadee and the towhee.

There are also shots of small animals such as the painted turtle, the garter snake and eastern Canada's only lizard, the blue-tailed skink. The program follows the development of these animals and birds from the time of the melting of the snow through to the fall.

The sequences filmed and recorded in western Canada include members of the gopher family, prairie dogs, ground squirrels and birds that nest away from the water such as the western meadowlark and the horned lark.

Dr. Gunn says that one problem encountered in filming the scenes in western Canada during the summer was the hot weather, particularly in Manitoba where the temperature was often 90 degrees in the shade, making the blinds absolutely stifling. The lack of water last summer also was responsible for the destruction of many nests.

Western Canadian scenes were taken near Brandon, Manitoba, in the prairie marsh, or slough; and in Saskatchewan and Alberta.

"Shooting film of birds and animals is mainly a matter of getting to know them and their habits," says Dr. Gunn. "By using a parabolic reflector and microphone, we were able to draw in the sounds from a distance of 30 or 40 feet, thereby not disturbing the animals or birds. Also, it's a matter of being opportunistic; of taking advantage of something going on while working on another subject.

"We were fortunate in getting some extremely good closeup shots of rare birds in the slough area in Manitoba. We got some shots among grebes of young birds climbing on the female's back and of the female getting up and carrying the young ones into the water, in a rumble-seat fashion. We also managed to get some spectacular shots in the forest of frogs and toads, along with their sounds."

Curling on Television

CBC's WORLD OF SPORT will present a seven-week series featuring Canada's top curlers commencing Saturday, December 9. "Cross Canada Curling" will be video-taped in three Canadian cities and will appear Saturday afternoons on the entire CBC-TV network.

Competitors will represent the same eleven categories which made up the Canadian curling championship finals each year. The 1961 provincial Brier winners to be seen on the program will include current Canadian champions—the Hec Gervais rink from Alberta. The television series, however, will not follow the Brier system of best "won-lost" record to decide an eventual champion. The four western rinks will play-off individually and the seven eastern entries will do likewise. Then the eastern and western winners will meet in the final program of the series to be aired January 20.

Hosting cities for the matches will be Halifax, Toronto and Winnipeg. Commentator for the western games will be Don Wittman of CBWT Winnipeg. The three western playoffs and the final championship will all be video-taped in Winnipeg—handled by veteran sports producer George Kent.

Bing Crosby conducts a musical search for relatives in London on his special one-hour show tonight on CBC-TV.

Westward, the mighty Lake Souris builds up deltas in the vicinity of Virden and Pipestone. There is constant change as the water drains away to the south and north.

CBXT—Father of the Bride

Nature photographers Dick Bird, Kenneth Campbell and Cleveland Grant have been working on this CBC commissioned project since last spring.

Dr. W. W. H. Gunn is co-ordinating the film. He is one of the most highly recognized experts in recording the sounds of nature. Two previous CBC radio programs in which he participated won international awards.

CBXT—Naked City

Murder Is A Face I Know. An apparently affectionate family man and law-abiding citizen is revealed to his son as a ruthless paid-for-hire killer.

Feature Movies

Saturday, December 9 at 8:45, Long Métrage presents one of the major French movies of the past years. "L'homme au chapeau rond," from Dostoevsky's "L'Eternel mari" stars Louis Seigner, Gisele Casadesus and the inimitable Raimu. It is the dramatic story of a widower, obsessed by the idea that his wife has once been unfaithful, who inflicts all kinds of punishments on his only daughter Lisa, and forever haunts an old friend with his sarcasms, accusing him of being the father of the child.

Monday, December 11 at 10:30, another top-notch French production will be seen on Long Métrage. Titled "Virevent," it is a comedy starring Roger Pigaut and Sophie Desmarests. On a farm near Nice, laziness seems to be the password, until one day a young man from the mountains meets the farmer's daughter. He is forced to leave for a prolonged trip abroad and when he returns more misfortune awaits him. Discouraged and disillusioned, the young man returns to his mountain pastureland.

In Music Land

Saturdays at 10:15, following the first Long Métrage, Le Club des autographes sends out an invitation to all dance-music lovers. Hosted by youthful Pierre Paquette, it stars each week the singing idols of our day and age, and allows guests to perform in front of the cameras in modern dance numbers played by the Michel Brouillette orchestra.

Sunday evenings at 8:30, Music-Hall presents the best in the variety world, as offered by Canadian, French and even American music-hall artists. December 10th, Canada's own Miss Music-Hall, Muriel Millard, will be guest. Among her offerings are: "Comment allez-vous?", "Prends garde à toi" which she will do in solo, and "Le p'tit béguin," "Diablement pour toi," "Pépito" and "Finie la fête" which she does with singing Master of ceremonies Jacques Normand. Guitarist Stéphane Golman will also be on the program, as well as comic Paul Berval and trapeze artists Ted and Flo Vallett.

Sur deux notes, Tuesday, December 12 at 9:30, will star singer Lucille Servat and comic Gilles Pellerin with Cleopatra: An Accident?

Did Cleopatra's nose change history? Was the result of the battle of Actium due to Antony's infatuation with the Nile beauty and not for the reasons historians usually toss at us? But suppose Cleo had had a large pug nose or a hooked monstrosity? What then? Is history really a series of occurrences determined by chance coincidences?

The might-have-been school of thought's emotional view of history is one of many intriguing aspects of historical study which Professor E. H. Carr has been discussing on CBC radio. Next Monday night, Dec. 18 at 10:30 he concludes a series of six lectures titled What is History?, in which he has examined the relation of the historian to history. On the following Monday a special panel discussion of the series by three distinguished Canadian scholars will be broadcast at the same hour.

The speakers will be Dr. James Eayrs, associate professor of political science at the University of Toronto, who will act as participating chairman; Dr. John Cairns, assistant professor of history at the University of Toronto; and Dr. George Grant, professor of religion at McMaster University. Lewis Miller, program organizer for the series, asked each panelist to submit to the chairman a list of what they consider to be the main controversial areas of the lecture series. But the panelists will have no contact with each other until they enter the studio on Monday night. Production is by Margaret Lyons.

Among likely questions the panel will discuss is the subject of the lectures—What is History?—a topic on which few people can ever agree. Another topic the panel will undoubtedly be concerned with,

Miller says, is the extent to which the historian should be a moralist. Is there any point in making moral judgments about Napoleon, Charlemagne or Cleopatra?

Broadcast and recorded last spring by the BBC, the series was adapted from Carr's Macaulay-Trevelyan Lectures given earlier in the year at Cambridge University, where he was elected a Fellow of Trinity College in 1955. The lectures have just been published in book form by Macmillan's. Price: $4.50.

Reviewing the lectures in The Observer, fellow historian A. J. P. Taylor wrote: "Like Goering with culture, I reach for my revolver when offered philosophies of history. But there are exceptions . . . Then we listen with respect, and no one is entitled to greater respect than Mr. Carr. He is without rival among contemporary historians. His History of Soviet Russia is a masterpiece of scholarship and narration. No man knows better the problems which an historian encounters; no man has a higher sense both of the historian's responsibilities and of his limitations. He can range from meticulous detail to wide generalizations. He sees both the furniture of his own study and the stir of the great world. As well, he has a beautiful gift for exposition which makes his lectures a delight to read. Who can resist a lecture which begins with the words: 'If milk is set to boil in a saucepan, it boils over. I do not know, and have never wanted to know, why this happens.'"

That is the way Carr opens his lecture on Causation in History. He points out that "Antony's (Please turn to page 25)

SPORTS

THIS MAY SOUND like a commercial, but CBC listeners and viewers are the luckiest sport fans in the country. Where else do you see and hear the top sporting attractions as they happen, and in every field of endeavour, and from anywhere on the continent?

There's another coming up on Monday, December 4. The World Heavyweight Championship fight between defending title-holder Floyd Patterson and challenger Tom McNeeley will be carried on the CBC's Trans-Canada radio network. We would have it on TV too, except that the promoters of these things put the price far out of reason and so deprive fans across the country of actually seeing the battle.

Speaking of football, the CBC-TV network has made the Grey Cup game something that everybody can go to. Grey Cup day is practically a national holiday in Canada—now, thanks first to the Calgary Stampeders and their rabid supporters, and secondly to CBC-TV. This year was no exception.

Another popular winter sport became available to viewers this year for the first time. Cross Canada Curling, featuring championship rinks from every province in the land are taking part in the series that winds up with a national final January 20.

There still is Saturday afternoon bowling and of course the ever-popular National Hockey League telecasts. This week you will see the upstart New York Rangers playing the all-powerful Canadiens in Montreal.

On Sunday, December 10, another of those top-flight NFL football games featuring the New York Giants and the Philadelphia Eagles.

LATE CONCERT

(Rescheduled from last week).
Recorded Louisville Commissioned works, from the current series:

1. To the Chief Musician, Metamorphoses for Orchestra by Israeli composer Paul Ben-Haim.

This work, says the composer, is based on a single theme, which is then varied and transformed in much the same way the Psalms treat a basic idea in poetic variation. The 49th Psalm was chosen as the model.

2. Variation for Violin and Orchestra, op. 71, by the American composer Wallingford Riegger. Sidney Harth, violinist, with orchestra.

Consisting of a theme, 12 variations plus a cadenza, this work is dodecaphonic or 12-tone in its technique, even though certain of the variations have a way of deviating from a too strict application of it.

3. Cuatro Madrigales Amatorios — by Spanish composer Joaquin Rodrigo, Audrey Nossaman, soprano with orchestra.

With What Shall I Wash Myself?
You have killed me, you bare-headed child!
From whence do you come, Love?
From the poplars, Mother, I come.

Four Spanish "Coplas" from Andalusia as originally improvised by women at work are orchestrated with sophisticated skill while the vocal line retains the simple quality of the words.

Prepared by Ben Horch.

METROPOLITAN OPERA

A production of Lucia di Lammermoor, by Donizetti. Conducted by Silvio Varviso. The cast includes Joan Sutherland as Lucia, Lorenzo Testi as Enrico, Richard Tucker as Edgardo, and Nicola Moscona as Raimondo.

Act I—Outside Lammermoor Castle. Concerned in Jacobite conspiracies, Enrico needs help at court and plans to marry his sister, Lucia, to the influential Lord Arthur. Lucia, however, is in love with Enrico's enemy, Edgardo. Hearing of their meetings, Enrico swears to have Edgardo's life. One last meeting takes place between Lucia and Edgardo before he departs on a mission to France.

Act II—A Room in the Castle. Guests are assembled for the betrothal of Lucia and Lord Arthur. Enrico has been intercepting Edgardo's letters and has even forged a letter in which Edgardo tells of a new love and repudiates his promises. Lucia is broken-hearted and wants only death but consents to the marriage in order to save the family.

Change of scene: The great hall of the castle. The dejected Lucia signs the marriage contract. Edgardo unexpectedly appears, is shown the marriage contract, and in a rage tears his ring from her finger and stamps on it. Lucia swoons, swords are drawn, but Edgardo is permitted to leave.

Act III—In the Castle. Raimondo is telling the guests of dreadful events. On hearing cries, he had gone to the bridal chamber where he found Arthur dead and Lucia, now quite mad, waving aloft his sword. Lucia enters, a victim of wild and pathetic hallucinations. (The famous "Mad Scene.")

Change of scene: A gloomy glade near the tombs of Edgardo's family. He laments his lot and Lucia's supposed happiness. But he is told the true story and Raimondo enters to announce the death of Lucia.

In despair Edgardo plunges a dagger to his heart and dies near the tombs of his ancestors.

Joan Sutherland Makes Met Debut

THE METROPOLITAN OPERA broadcasts begin their 31st year on Saturday afternoon at 2:00 p.m. over the CBC Trans-Canada radio network with a performance of Donizetti's Lucia di Lammermoor, starring the celebrated Australian coloratura soprano Joan Sutherland, in the title role which has made her world famous.

Miss Sutherland made her Met debut as Lucia on November 26, and Saturday's performance will be her first opera broadcast. (She was a guest on the Met's Opera News intermission program last season.) The opera, which has been absent from the Met repertoire since the 1958-59 season, will be directed by Silvio Varviso, a Swiss conductor who is also making his Met debut. Lorenzo Testi will be heard as Enrico, Richard Tucker as Edgardo, and Nicola Moscona as Raunondo.

Highlights of the Met season include performances of Wagner's monumental cycle of four operas, The Ring of the Nibelung, on four Saturday afternoons: Das Rheingold on Dec. 16, Die Walkure on Dec. 23, Siegfried on Jan. 13, and Götterdämmerung on Jan. 27. The complete cycle hasn't been heard at the Met since the 1956-57 season. Except for Bayreuth, the Met is the only opera house in the world able to produce this huge work.

Where Birds Are Respected

"Iceland is so sparsely populated and so unspoiled that it almost seems as if man were there on sufferance, not birds. Of course, this is largely because, generally speaking, Icelanders recognize the rights of birds to rear their families in peace. It doesn't seem to occur to them that man has the privilege of destroying wild creatures. Nature creeps right up to the walls of the farms, and the birds start as soon as you leave the towns." — Ornithologist Arnold Benington speaking on the BBC.

Met broadcasts this season will include two new productions: Puccini's La Fanciulla Del West (The Girl of the Golden West) on January 6, an opera that has been out of the Met repertoire for 30 years and never before broadcast; and Un Ballo in Maschera (The Masked Ball) on March 17.

Milton Cross, who hasn't missed taking part in a Met broadcast since he introduced the first one on Christmas Day, 1931, will be back again to interpret on-stage pageantry and action for the radio audience. The popular intermission feature of other seasons will be heard, too. Opera News on the Air, a first-intermission highlight since 1945, presents authoritative musical personalities discussing operatic subjects from both musical and dramatic viewpoints. In Opera Quiz, beginning its 22nd year, quizmaster Edward Downes, critic, lecturer, author and musical historian, asks questions submitted by listeners, and a panel of musical experts tries to answer them. The purpose of the quiz is not just to challenge the experts but to provoke discussion on any operatic subject that can further enhance listeners' appreciation of opera.

Questions may be submitted with or without answers to Texaco Opera Quiz, Texaco, Inc., 135 East 42nd Street, New York 17. A prize-package is sent to the sender of each question used. When there is a third intermission the feature will be Biographies in Music, in which Francis Robinson recalls the lives and careers of great operatic artists of the past, illustrated with their recordings. Since 1952 Robinson has been an assistant manager of the infatuation with Cleopatra was just as much causally determined as anything else that happens: the relation between female beauty and male infatuation is one of a most regular observable sequence of cause and effect in everyday life. . . . When King Alexander of Greece died in the autumn of 1920 from the bite of a pet monkey, this incident touched off a train of events which led Sir Winston Churchill to remark that 'a quarter of a million persons died of this monkey's bite.' Or take Trotsky's comment on the fever contracted while shooting ducks which put him out of action at a critical point of his quarrel with Zinoviev, Kameneva and Stalin in the autumn of 1923. 'One can foresee a revolution or a war,' Trotsky wrote, 'but it is impossible to foresee the consequences of an autumn shooting-trip for wild duck.'

Professor Carr goes on to say: "The shape of Cleopatra's nose, the monkey-bite that killed King Alexander, the death of Lenin—these were accidents which modified the course of history. It is futile to attempt to spirit them away, or to pretend that in some way or other they have no effect. On the other hand, in so far as they were purely accidental, they do not enter into any rational interpretation of history, or into the historian's hierarchy of significant clauses. The world of the historian, like the world of the scientist, is not a photographic copy of the real world, but rather a working model which enables him more or less effectively to understand it and to master it. The historian distils from the experience of the past, or from so much of it as is accessible to him, that part which he recognizes as amenable to rational explanation and interpretation, and from it draws conclusions which may serve as a guide to action."

Carr sees history as "a continuous process of interaction between the historian and his facts, an unending dialogue between the present and the past." He suggests that we study the historian before we begin to study his facts. "It is what is already done by the intelligent undergraduate who, when recommended to read a work by that great scholar Jones of St. Jude's, goes round to a friend at St. Jude's to ask what sort of chap Jones is, and what bees he has in his bonnet. When you read a work of history, always listen out for the buzzing. If you can detect none, either you are tone deaf or your historian is a dull dog. By and large, the historian will get the kind of facts he wants. History means interpretation."

Carr sees history as a social process in which people are involved as social beings, and he thinks the imaginary antithesis between society and the individual is nothing but a red herring. "The individual apart from society would be both speechless and mindless," he says. "The lasting fascination of the Robinson Crusoe myth is due to its attempt to imagine an individual independent of society. The attempt breaks down. Robinson is not an abstract individual, but an Englishman from York; he carries his Bible with him and prays to his tribal God. The myth quickly bestows on him his Man Friday; and the building of a new society begins."

Should the historian be a moralist? Professor Carr points out that history is movement, and movement implies comparison. But should King John always be labelled as bad and Queen Bess as good? Carr rejects the notion of the historian as a hanging judge. "He will not pass judgment on the individual slave-owner. But this does not prevent him from condemning a slave-owning society. Historical facts presuppose some measure of interpretation; and historical interpretations always involve moral judgment. This is, however, only the beginning of our difficulties. History is a process of struggle in which results, whether we judge them good or bad, are achieved by some groups directly or indirectly—and more often directly than indirectly — at the expense of others. The losers pay. Suffering is indigenous in history. Every great period of history has its casualties as well as its victories."

Carr also sees history as progress — the greatest success story. The significant things are what men and women through recorded time have done, not what they failed to do, and he feels that the defeated have contributed as much to the end result as the winners.

This Monday night Professor Carr discusses the widening horizon of history. "History is the long struggle of man, by the exercise of his reason, to understand his environment and to act upon it," he says. "But the modern period has broadened the struggle in a revolutionary way. Man now seeks to understand, and to act on, not only his environment, but himself; and this has added, so to speak, a new dimension to reason, and a new dimension to history." He ends on a highly optimistic note.

MET OPERA

Metropolitan Opera Association. He is the author of Caruso—His Life in Pictures, and has been described by the Saturday Review as "perhaps our leading custodian of Caruso memorabilia and lore."

Joan Sutherland's first performance in the title role of Lucia di Lammermoor at Covent Garden three years ago rocketed her to the status of diva, and in her Parisian debut in the same role 18 months later she scored what one critic described as "a triumph such as no singer has enjoyed in Paris for as long as most people can remember. . . . The Mad Scene, in particular, held me breathless."

Critics have compared her voice to such great singers of the past as Nellie Melba and Adelina Patti. Miss Sutherland, born in Sydney, Australia, in 1928, made her singing debut at 21 in a concert performance of the difficult Dido and Aeneas, and within three years won several substantial prizes which helped finance her trip to Britain in 1951. After 13 auditions, Covent Garden signed her up, and she was soon receiving glowing reviews for her brilliant performances in leading roles.

She married Australian concert pianist Richard Bonyngé, who is now her accompanist and vocal coach. He believed that her true range was that of a coloratura rather than of a dramatic soprano, and helped her develop in that direction. His opinion was justified in February, 1959, when she first sang Lucia at Covent Garden, and critics and public hailed her as that rarity—a coloratura in the grand tradition.

Donizetti chose Sir Walter Scott's novel, The Bride of Lammermoor as the basis for his opera. Legend says the composer's own ancestors hailed from Perthshire, Scotland, where they were in the woollen industry, as Donizetti's father was in Bergamo.

Scott dictated his novel while recuperating from a severe illness, but, recalls one historian, "when it was first put into his hands in a complete form, he did not recollect one simple incident, character or conversation it contained." Perhaps the mystical quality of the story possessed its author while he was working on it, and he wrote in a weird dream-world removed from reality.

It is certainly a strange story. Scott based it on an actual 17th-century murder that is as mysterious as any modern whodunit.

In Scotland, a young lawyer called James Dalrymple, married the daughter of Ross of Balnial. (Please turn to page 29)

The two of them were obsessed with the need for social position. Their eldest daughter, Janet (who survives in literature as Lucy or Lucia) was dominated and not greatly loved by her mother. On August 12, 1669, Janet was married to David Dunbar, son of a neighbour, Dunbar of Baldoon. On August 24, when Janet was alive and by all accounts in good health, she and David moved from her parents' home to Baldoon, accompanied by a gaily-attired group of friends, and in their new home the young couple were entertained with a masque, a drama, and other festivities. On September 12, exactly one month from her marriage, Janet was dead.

Apparently her husband wasn't her first love. She had been engaged to Lord Rutherford (Edgardo, in the opera), but her parents objected to him because of his comparative poverty and his political affiliations, and they insisted that Janet marry Rutherford's nephew, David.

There are at least six recorded accounts of the Dalrymple mystery, all different. The family kept a close mouth about the whole thing, so it has puzzled historians and romanticists for three centuries. One version, written by a minister, states that on her wedding night was "taken from her bridegroom and harled (dragged) through the house by spirits, and soon afterwards died." Dalrymple family legend says that Janet's rejected fiancé assaulted her husband and she went mad watching the attack.

Another account tells of how Janet "attacked" (Dunbar) furiously with a knife and wounded him severely before anyone could gain admittance. When the door was broken open, the youth was found half-dead upon the floor and the wife, in a state of the wildest madness, exclaimed: 'Tak' up your bonnie bridegroom.' Janet's senses were gone and never returned.

The only story that describes her as the murdered, not the murderer, recalls that on the night of the murder, Janet's "dismal shrieks and groans" resounded from the couple's rooms. When they investigated, the others in the house found "Janet weltering in her own blood, extended on the bed, and her husband, in a state of complete idiocy, was seated in the chimney, glaring with his eyes and laughing in a hideous manner." This account sounds the most probable to most historians, as Janet might have died a fortnight later from the effects of her wounds. Apparently no members of her family attended her funeral, or even enquired into her death. Two years later her husband, who was badly scarred about the face, re-married and ever after would challenge any man to a duel who enquired about his facial scars. He died in 1682 after a fall from his horse.

There are weather machines which are geared to react mathematically in the way weather does in real life, as The Living Machine shows on Explorations. Huge amounts of carefully-selected past facts about the world's weather are fed into and stored in the memory department of the computer. Then, when current weather data is added, the machine can predict future weather behaviour and help trained weathermen to do long-range forecasting which is much more reliable than it is when they use regular meteorological techniques.

Tonight, Jack Peach, now a Calgary broadcaster, tells us about this almost disastrous first step in his working career.

computer which beats him so consistently at checkers that he's stopped playing with it until he can improve his own technique. It never makes the same mistake twice, and he has it so well trained that it always ends a game by tapping out: "Sorry, you lose. Thanks for the game."

The second program compares basic principles and functions of new electronic devices with the human brain. It follows astronaut Alan Sheppard on his ballistic flight into space and observes various devices which simulate functions of human senses. And it ends with an impressionistic visit to a museum of natural history. There, it suggests, a study of man's past achievements may lead to better understanding of his nature and of his future. Where love and emotions are concerned, man is still the master. But will the robots some day learn how to destroy their master? That's the frightening thought behind the second industrial revolution.

the singing m.c. Marc Gélinas in a half-hour variety program.

Wednesday is THE day however for music lovers, with three popular offerings. Starting with "Filles et garçons," a folk music and dance program hosted by Yoland Guérard, at 7:30, on to "Dans les rues de Québec," another variety program at 8:30, the musical evening ends with Récital at 10:00. This week's guest is the renowned and ever-popular soprano Pierrette Alarie. She will be accompanied at the piano by Allen Rogers in a variety of numbers by Debussy and Schubert. These are: "Il pleure dans mon coeur," "Green" and "Les Chevaux de bois" from "Ariettes oubliées" by Debussy; "Paysage sentimental" and "L'échelonnement des haies" also by the French composer, and finally "Auf einen Kirchhof," "Die Mäanner sind merchant," "Das Lied im Grünen," and "Lebensmut" by Franz Schubert.

To complete this week's music, there will be a special 60-minute one-man show by the popular French actor-singer Yves Montand on Thursday, December 14 from 9:00 to 10:00 p.m. The program is a repeat performance, dating back to 1955 when Mr. Montand and his wife (Simone Signoret) toured Russia. Presented as a semi-documentary semi-variety program, this program will highlight some of Mr. Montand's concert appearances in Moscow and elsewhere. It is titled "Yves Montand chante."

The Darkest Islands

"I have never understood the reputation of the British for insularity. I think it's because people think that the only islands in the world are pieces of land surrounded by water. Certainly, the British are insular in that respect but only in that respect. Far more serious islands in the world are peoples who are surrounded by impervious states of mind."—Laurens Van Der Post, traveller and author, speaking on the BBC.

Western singer Stu Phillips is seen here with some of his audience when he visited the Shriner's Winnipeg hospital recently to tape one of his radio programs.

Blow Hot, Blow Cold

"We've mastered the air a little with clothing and heating. We don't melt in the Thar Desert and we don't turn to eternal ice at the Arctic Pole. But still from one minute to the next, air is dictating our life: because our life, after all, is the way we feel, and it's a pathetic truth that our moods are more responsive to the vagaries of the air than any barometer."—Poet Ted Hughes speaking on the BBC.

- Grated rind of 1 lemon
 - 1 tbsp. lemon juice
 - $\frac{1}{4}$ cup melted margarine

Wash and core apples. Place in small baking dish. Bake in moderate oven (350°) for 20 minutes. Separate egg. Beat egg white until stiff, add egg yolk and beat well. Add sugar, milk, lemon rind and juice. Mix well. Add margarine. Pour over apples and continue baking until apples are tender—about 10 minutes.

Serve hot using the custard sauce over apples. This will serve 4.
